

Little River Trail Network

Please note: While every effort has been made to ensure accuracy of the data presented, trail conditions and infrastructure vary over time and weather conditions may preclude access during portions of the year. Peripheral trail segments cross private land. Landowners have the right to preclude access. Please respect property boundaries.

The Little River Conservation area is a 400± acre area of lands managed by the Exeter Conservation Commission for conservation and recreation purposes. This area is comprised of FGS Corporation (37), the Rockingham Economic Development Commission (33), the Houck/Kazanjan lands (6), and several easements from the Dolloff family (6E, 7E).

The area is traversed by the Little River, and Dudley and Bloody Brooks, and when combined with the NH Fish and Game-managed Conner Farm wildlife Management Area to the north, creates a large area of conserved lands which extends from Brentwood Road north to Route 101.

The primary trail is accessed by a trailhead at the top of the Dolloff's driveway for 143 Brentwood Rd. Parking is located in the field directly across the street on the south side of Brentwood Rd/ Route 111A. Use caution crossing the street as it can be fairly busy at times. The trail (white blazes) follows along the river with several points of interest marked and a loop that will return you to the point of origin. Crossing the Little River footbridge will connect ultimately with Continental Drive.

Additional access points to the trail can be made via the end of Continental Drive, between 5 and 8 Dolloff Farm Drive, or Old Garrison Lane.

The tract is home to a variety of wildlife and includes mixed conifer and deciduous forest, wetlands and riparian habitat.

Location: On the north side of Brentwood Road, the trail begins at the top of the private driveway at 143 Brentwood Road.

Length: 1.7 miles as a loop from the Dolloff parking area.
